

First Doctoral Student to Graduate

The faculty of SCSU's Doctoral Program in Higher Education Administration is pleased to announce that the first student to graduate from the program will receive her doctorate at commencement this coming weekend.

Patricia McAuley, a member of the first cohort admitted in fall term 2007, completed all requirements for the degree and will become the first graduate of a self-contained doctoral program in the history of St. Cloud State University.

Congratulations to Pat for her excellent work and persistence toward the goal of earning her degree, and to her advisor, Dr. Dan Macari, for his support and facilitation of this historic event. We look forward to celebrating Pat's accomplishments this weekend and to similar celebrations for other students in graduation ceremonies in the future.

Michael Mills

Associate Professor and Director

Doctoral Program in Higher Education Administration

St. Cloud State University