Our Commitment to Campus Safety and Loss Control

Keeping our college and university campus environments safe for students, faculty and staff is of utmost importance in delivering quality education and training to the people of Minnesota. Besides the impact on the individual, we are affected both financially and programmatically anytime an accident or injury occurs at any of our on- or off-campus locations. An effective safety program can reduce or even eliminate these losses.

Let's be clear about our approach to safety, environmental compliance and loss control:

- Colleges and universities will conduct their work in a manner that promotes the safety and health of students, faculty, staff and visitors to campus;
- All employees of the Minnesota State Colleges and Universities system – especially those in leadership, program delivery and supervisory roles – will be accountable for campus safety and loss control activities;
- Campus and system leadership must take steps to ensure a safe work environment, compliance with state environmental and safety regulations, and reduce losses associated with accidents and injuries.

We are committed to creating and maintaining safe and healthy campus environment by:

- Communicating our safety and environmental compliance efforts to our students, faculty, staff and stakeholders;
- Integrating our safety and loss control responsibilities into our academic, fiscal, facilities and other operational duties;
- Continually improving our safety, compliance and loss control programs;
- Providing training and support necessary to carry out these responsibilities.
