

Schools to offer new engineering degree

The presidents of St. Cloud State University and Metropolitan State University announced this week that they will offer a master of engineering management degree program in the Twin Cities this fall.

The program is designed to prepare graduates for management roles in technical and scientific organizations. The course content is suitable for engineers in disciplines including mechanical, manufacturing and industrial, electrical, civil, computer and software engineering.

The degree program had been offered only on the St. Cloud State campus, which will remain the degree-granting institution.
