II. Hearings

a. Open Gallery I

i. Adam Klepetar

He came to introduce himself, he's serving in a new role as assistant provo.

He shared the numbers of student involvement this year.

200 students signed up for service projects

1600 students went to the ice cream social

Decline in neighborhood citations

Advisors appointed before students came, unlike other years when they got them in October.

Pilot project of intended major, to help them plan for the future

Launch of Mapworks survey, 82% of students responded, over 5,000 students. Over 193 faculty/staff used Mapworks

Questions:

Chair Onnen: When is Mapworks coming up?

Speaker Klepetar: It was bought by a new company, so there was some difficulty. It should be up by next Wednesday at the latest.

Chair Uecker: Did you remember those business cards?

Speaker Klepetar: Yes I did.

President Vogl: Advising is going to be a key thing, so these individuals are who you're going to be paired with, so if you have any questions or comments now would be the time.

Senator Bryson: I was at the ice cream social, some freshman said they wanted more activities. My advising day was stressful, with a lot of AP and upper classes made it difficult.

Speaker Klepetar: Thanks for the feedback

Senator Mitchell: I brought the sheet of the four year plan engineers get, and I think it should be a thing that all four year plans.

Speaker Klepetar: IT hasn't been something we have been able to use with non majors before, but with the Intended major project we are hoping to open up the resources to all students.

Senator Gloe: I am currently in the Herberger business school, and have heard that the advising needs improving. With the advisors being professors they don't focus on the needs of the students. Advising should be focused on the students instead of the professors interests.

Senator Enstrom: Was the summer meeting with the advisor a one on one or group meeting? I was in a group of 30 students.

Speaker Klepetar: We usually have a max of 8 students and we have the students start off with meeting their advisors in a group with time for one on one conversation, but then the follow up is one on one.

Senator La Vine: Last year when I began I fell through the cracks, because nobody was aware of my previous program, is there anything going towards helping that.

Speaker Klepetar: We had some advisors step in to help provide help to the preprofessional program.

Chair Uecker: Would it ever be possible to have extended hours of advising during the first couple weeks?

Speaker Klepetar: Absolutely, it's one of our major goals to extend into the evening, to help the students that aren't available to come in during our current hours. We moved to doing advising Monday-Friday and Sunday.

Senator Gloe: 34% of students are transfer students. My friend was a transfer and said she lacked guidance, do you offer the same options in spring that you do fall?

Speaker Klepetar: We are doing new students orientation, to help reach out to transfer students.

President Vogl: Is there anything for an online version?

Speaker Klepetar: Yes, we have online options. We have written a grant to develop more online options.

Chair Uecker: Have you come up with incentives to get students to see their advisors.

Speaker Klepetar: Yes we have tried, but we need new ideas. We have used early registration to get people in with their advisors. We are trying to get easier ways for the advisors to connect to the students.

Senator Mitchell: Maybe the first years could be matched up with fourth year students to help them mentor and give them advice from their own experience and help them personally throughout the year.

Speaker Klepetar: That's what the coaching model is, we are trying to do exactly that.

Senator Schlepp: In the pre advising groups, are they paired up with intended major advisors.

Speaker Klepetar: Yes in a sense, the goal is to get the students paired with someone to help them to their goal.

Senator Winterquist: As a honor student, when I look for an advisor it says to go to the honors office, do we not get assigned?

Speaker Klepetar: Yes, they get a special assignment to the Honors office to get assigned with someone, until they get assigned to their major specific advisor, but then always have the option of using the services provided by the honors office.

Senator Enstrom: A lot of people are more afraid of public safety and we should work on that.

Senator Gloe: It would be a good idea that we get the students to have their number at orientation.

President Vogl: So promote their other services to get the students more willing to use their services.

Senator Winterquist: They did have us enter Public Safety's number at orientation.

Senator Schlepp: Is there a way to do a meet and greet?

President Vogl: There are safety walks coming up.

Senator Schlepp: Maybe having an event to talk to public safety

Chair Uecker: Maybe having a way to get notifications from public safety.

Senator Kennedy: I lived on campus this summer, and I didn't know the extent of what public safety covers. Would I contact a different service? We should clarify Chair Muzammil: The police will take care of off campus problems, public safety just offers an escort to a zone of off campus area.

Chair Commers: Maybe we can have posters with more information on Public Safety.

President Vogl: How many people here have public safety's number, show of hands.

Senator La Vine: Maybe it would be helpful for them to have regular contact with SG to exchange information.

President Vogl: The CAPS comes in to talk to us and update us.

Senator Bryson: An idea would be for student to sit in the library to be a buddy system of escorting people

President Vogl: maybe we could find an organization that needs volunteer hours to do that.
